My Discovery Journal

Look closely. Wonder freely. Discover something new.

A creative companion to The Art of Discovery

Read the story on a screen — no color printer needed.

Print these black-and-white activity pages whenever you like.

Use a pencil, crayon, or whatever you have nearby.

Every discovery begins with curiosity.

My name: _____

The Brave Snail

Have you ever found something surprising?

What did you notice? What did you wonder?

Draw your discovery here...

Or write a few words about it:

The Sleeping Giant

Can you find the sleeping giant?

Perhaps you see something else.

What do you see that nobody else has noticed?

Draw your discovery here...

Or write a few words about it:

The Ship in the Sky

If you could sail on a cloud,
where would you go?
What might you discover along the way?

Draw your cloud-ship adventure here...

Or write a few words about your journey:

The Mysterious Footprints

What might be hiding along the shore?

Look closely at the painting.

What tiny mystery can you discover or imagine?

Draw your discovery here...

Or write a few words about your discovery:

The Dancing Wave

What shapes can a wave make?

Imagine the lines the sea leaves in the sand.

What could they become in your imagination?

Draw your discovery here...

Or write a few words about your discovery:

The Sea of Dreams

What wonders can something small hold?

Think of a shell, a stone, or a drop of water.

What might you discover if you look closely?

Draw your discovery here...

Or write a few words about your discovery:

Your Next Discovery

Take a moment to look around you.

What catches your attention? What might it become?
